Evergreen Audubon is once again offering an after school program for budding nature enthusiasts. Under the imaginative and energetic leadership of Dina Baker, and assisted by our own junior naturalist Jenna Audlin, an eager group of elementary school students has already tackled important topics such as “Leave No Trace,” “Decomposers” and “Hikin’ for Lichen,”

Every afternoon includes snacks, stories, outdoor hiking, crafts and other activities. For example, on decomposition day, the group studied two different types of worms: touching them, looking at them through a magnifying glass, measuring them and drawing them. If you know any children who might like to join us, have their parents contact Dina at ENCDirector@EvergreenAudubon.org
