

Do you see Rosy-Finches in your neighborhood?

Melissa Leasia. November 28, 2021 :

The Rosy-Finch Project is seeking Feeder Count Volunteers for the winter 2021-2022 season. Volunteers across multiple Western states will conduct 20-minute bird feeder counts for Rosy-Finches once a month throughout the winter and early spring (December – April), with five total surveys during the season. Surveys may be done at publicly accessible bird feeder locations or at your own bird feeders in your backyard.

Rosy-Finches are one of the least-studied birds in North America, and we are working to answer questions about these mysterious alpine birds to support future conservation planning. This project is open to anyone and everyone with an interest in birds, community conservation science, or just getting outside!

Registration is required. Recorded online training is available. To learn more about the project, visit <https://sagelandcollaborative.org/rosy-finch> and register via this link to join the virtual training.

Calling All Feeder Watchers

The Rosy-finch Study is seeking volunteers to count rosy-finches at bird feeders across their range.

- ❑ Conduct a 20-minute feeder count once a month from Dec - Apr
- ❑ Survey your own feeder or choose a publicly accessible one
- ❑ Fill data gaps to help rosy-finch conservation efforts

Live Virtual Training Session:
Nov 16, 7pm-8pm MST
Watch our 1-hour virtual training live on Nov 16, 7pm-8pm Mountain Time, or watch the recording afterward.

Learn more and sign up: sagelandcollaborative.org/rosy-finch

